

Farmer to Farmer Trips to Guatemala and Honduras January 2012

Travel with a small group visiting places far off the tourist trail. These trips are led by Farmer to Farmer members that know these countries well. Farmer to Farmer offers a few partial scholarships for travel for those in need. Join us south of the border!

Honduras trip January 7-14, 2012

Our fourth annual trip to Honduras will be led again by Andrew Gaertner, a Farmer to Farmer board member who served in the Peace Corps in Honduras. We will visit the farms and coffee cooperatives in the mountains of central Honduras near Comayagua, the colonial capital. We will spend several days both visiting the people and exploring the rich natural wonders of the cloud forest in Rio Negro. We hope to be involved with a service project in Rio Negro, installing a micro-hydroelectric generator. Trip goers are encouraged to plan for some extra time on either end of the guided trip to explore other areas of Honduras on their own, especially the North Coast, the Bay Islands, and Copan. Guatemala Culture and Farm trip January 8-15 with an optional 4 day add on.

This is our sixth trip to Guatemala led by Jody Slocum. The 7-10 day trip will start in Antigua, the UNESCO world heritage city, seeing the town, the market, museum and other projects. We will then travel to beautiful Lake Atitlan where our time will be spent visiting the Tzu'tujil Maya family members of Farmer to Farmer, weavers, farms and other Maya villages around the lake. We will be giving out school scholarships to the students we support in Santiago Atitlan. People staying the full 10 days will then travel up north to Huehuetenango area to visit the Mam Maya people of the coffee cooperative: UPC, where our Farmer to Farmer coffee is grown. We will visit farms and spend time getting to know the people that grow our coffee.
